Discussion

On January 21, 2010 the Supreme Court arrived at a landmark decision in the case of Citizens United v. FEC. It found that the First Amendment prohibited the government from placing any limit on how much corporations could spend on political advertising campaigns.

If corporations are legal persons, they enjoy all the constitutional protections of human beings.

A new era in American politics had begun and the battle lines are quickly taking shape.

The workshop will be conducted by a team led by Russell Branca
Including the Big Apple Coffee Party and the Upper West Side Coffee Party
