Since 9/11 our country has faced a constitutional and moral crisis: a pervasive fear of another 9/11-type attack has been used to justify interrogations that are viewed around the world as constituting torture. How did we get here?

“Does Torture Work?” explores the Philippine-American relationship and how it intersects in crucial ways with the here and now. What is torture? What is the history of torture in the Western Democracies? How does this history intersect with our current situation? Does torture work?

Co-Directors Jeffery Stephens, Jay Boekelheide, and Rachel Silverman have many years of experience and awards (including an Oscar) in radio and television, as well as feature and documentary film.
