On tour in the U.S. from Iran, Dr. Shahriar Khateri and Dr. Mohammad Soroush, have many years experience treating victims of chemical weapons used in the Iran/Iraq war of the 1980s. Speaking to both medical professionals and to the general public, they address the short and long term medical consequences of chemical warfare hoping to heighten the awareness of the devastation of weapons of mass destruction and to remind us that we must work to abolish these weapons.
